Dear Mr. Jaffe:

I am so thankful to magazines such as Peta's Animal Times. It has given me a new light on a generation of animal cruelty. It has changed my way of life completely.

I am strongly against forced molting of layer hens. It is very disturbing to anyone who reads of such torment and cruelty. Not only are you jeopardizing the lives of the hens but your consumers as well. The conditions which the hens are raised, is the reason there are contaminated eggs which in turn means many sickness to humans. There should be a law against poisoning your consumers.

Now my job as an animal lover, is to make more people aware of such torment and cruelty. Once more people become aware of this, the more people will agree with me and many others.

I realize my letter isn't going to change much, but it will change the eggs I purchase. I will only buy from a local health food store that sells products against animal cruelty and animal testing. I hope sometime soon that something will be done to stop this nonsense. I am grateful to the companies that do not promote animal cruelty. They are the future companies that are making a difference in a world that needs it. They have already made a difference in my family's life.

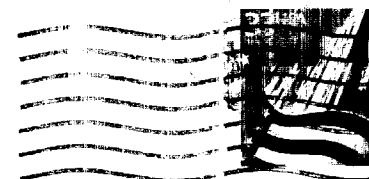

Sincerely,

Jill Zeller
